

BEYOND BOOKS

During Prohibition, the paneled library was a secret retreat for the man of the house—it even has a hidden wine vault. Judy King of Judy King Interiors used rare books and antique trophies to reflect that refined, masculine air, with a brown-and-white zebra-print rug and custom wing chair adding to the clubby feel.

- Lightweight Kravet linen drapes balance the rich tones of the paneling.
- An oversize green ottoman repeats the Greek key trim of the drapes.
- A cushioned window seat adds an extra perch in the small space.

COZY AND INVITING

The ideal spot to enjoy a quiet moment is along the second-floor landing. Suzette Donleavy of Well Designed Interiors divided the welcoming space into two: upholstered seating that calls for conversation with a cup of tea and a game table that beckons visitors to play backgammon.

- Dark wood tones are complemented by a rich palette of gold, maroon and blue.
- The matte finish of the mineral-blue Venetian-plastered walls introduces an organic element.
- Dressing the windows with the same treatment crafted of Beacon Hill fabric ties the two spaces together.
